hen started on the hike to this place. We sure had some time while in the Argonne section trying to keep up with the Germans. It was raining night and day and the mud from about four to ten inches deep in most all

The retreating Germans had blown up lots of the bridges and roads but the American engineers soon built bridges and it did not interfere with the advance as much as the Germans Apparently they took nothing but themselves as they went and some of them were not lucky enough to take themselves even from what we could
